Ruritans have trees

Again this year, the Oakville Ruritan Club has secured a goodly supply of Christmas trees.

According to Carey Carson, who heads up this project for the Ruritans, this year's supply is the finest selection of trees in recent years.

Freshly cut white pines from Floyd County, they are available in the lot adjoining the Farmers National Bank branch in Triangle Plaza.

Moon shows work

Robert DeWitt Moon of Chicago, Ill., formerly of Blacksburg, was one of the artists whose work was exhibited at the 1980 Virginia Craftsmen showing, open from November 18 through December 21 at the Virginia Museum in Richmond.

Because of the exceptionally high quality of the entries in this exhibition, to be able to exhibit work in this show is an honor. Most artists, as in the case of Moon, show only one piece.

Moon, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Moon of Appomattox is a graduate of Appomattox County High School and VPI/SU. Moon is designing and selling his original jewelry in Chicago and Blacksburg.

The work exhibited by Moon was a ring he fashioned of yellow gold, diamonds, and sapphires.

Part 2

Choose your tree with care

By SHIRLEY W. WALTON
Extension Agent

This is part two of a two-part article on Christmas tree selection and care.

Most dealers of previously cut trees handle perfectly fresh stock, but buyers should be cautious when purchasing trees just before Christmas or buying trees that have been in transport for several weeks. Dry trees lack luster, may wilt or lose their needles and are a significant fire hazard. If the needles are a dull grayish green color and feel stiff and brittle rather than rubbery, the tree is probably too dry to be satisfactory and safe in your home. A couple of other simple tests are to bounce the tree sharply on the ground and watch for excessive needle fall and to run your hand along a branch to see how easily the needles are removed.

Once the tree is brought home, the key to keeping it fresh, and hence safe and attractive, is to keep the base immersed in water at all times. I suggest that you sign a family member the task of keeping the Christmas tree watered daily. Next year rotate the job and give someone else the responsibility.

When the tree is brought inside for decoration, make a fresh cut across the trunk at least one inch above the old cut. This will allow the tree to absorb more water and, thereby, maintain a high moisture content. A tree in a warm room will absorb one to two quarts of water per day, so a fairly good sized reservoir is needed.

Most commercial additives that supposedly retard needle drop and increase fire resistance have proven to be only marginally effective at best. Keeping the tree supplied with water and away from heat sources such as fireplaces, radiators, heat ducts, and TV sets which dry the needles is the easiest and surest way of maintaining the trees appearance and safety. When given the proper care, a tree can be kept indoors up to three weeks without posing any problems.

Trees can be disposed of in several ways. Some people wish to set the tree up near a bird feeder to provide a sheltered perch. Christmas trees placed in a hedge row or brush pile provide cover for many forms of wildlife. As a note of caution, please do not burn Christmas trees in a fireplace because the resulting flare up may throw dangerous sparks into the room or cause a damaging chimney fire.

People desiring to transplant Christmas trees with intact root balls may either plant the trees immediately, providing a hole can be dug and the ground is not frozen, or they may postpone the planting until early Spring. When planting the tree, line the hole with peat moss and water the tree occasionally throughout the winter. If the planting is to be delayed, the tree should be placed out of a drying wind, yet where it will receive at least a few hours of sun each day. A corner of a cool or unheated garage near a window is a suitable location. The root mesh should be covered with burlap or heavily mulched with hay and watered about once a week.

If you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call the Appomattox County Extension Office at 352-8244 or you may write us at P. O. Box 488, Appomattox, Va. 24522.

Revival slated for Union Hill Baptists

The Union Hill Baptist Church will conduct Revival Services on Dec. 12, 13, and two services on Sunday, Dec. 14. The Reverend J. F. Aker, 109-year-old minister from Radford, Virginia, will do the preaching.

For a number of years the Rev. Aker served churches in Southwest Virginia as pastor, and for several years he has been doing evangelistic work conducting revival services in many places. He is now booked up for revival services through 1982.

Mrs. Aker, the former Louise Woods of Lynchburg, most always has a part in the services by singing a solo before he preaches.

The Union Hill Church cordially invites the public to attend these services. The services at night will be at 7:30 p.m. The church is located on highway 615 between Rustburg and Red House.

A nursery will be provided.

The business was suspended in favor of a time of Christmas songs by the group led by guest John Hall with Mrs. Don Jimison at the piano. Ruritans wives were in attendance along with new member Cecil Handy and wife Elaine.

Mr. Raymond Dickerson, "The Pipe Man", gave an interesting talk along with artifacts, about his dream, the Pamplin Pipe Factory and its history. He presented each Ruritan with a clay pipe which he made with the inscription, Oakville Ruritan, on each pipe. The meeting was adjourned with the Pledge to our Flag.

The annual Christmas Tree sale at the Plaza is now in progress with very shapely white pines for sale.

Drug abuse program given

Students in grades 4, 5, and 6 at Pamplin Elementary School were enthusiastic about the Drug Abuse orientation talk given by Deputy Phillip Seay on November 20, 1980.

Following a most informative overview of the drug problem, information on the consequences of using specific drugs was provided.

A very fruitful question and answer period followed the general orientation talk in which Deputy Seay answered many concerns of sixth grade students who have recently completed a unit of study on Drug Abuse.
